2 Course Overview & Objectives

The purpose of this course is to explore the fundamental concepts in the field of international relations and how to think about the relationship among these concepts. You will learn the three major approaches to thinking about international relations and how these approaches explain terrorism, globalization, environmental cooperation, respect for human rights, and many other phenomena. You will learn how to sort through arguments about these topics and make informed decisions about these processes. You also will learn how these concepts have developed and evolved throughout history for the purposes of generating hypotheses about the future of international relations.

3 Course Format

The course is structured to consider various theoretical approaches in the study of international relations. In the first third of the term, we consider approaches to the study of international security. We look more closely at international political economy in the second third. The final portion explores the global environment, human rights, global governance, and nonstate actors. The readings largely will be drawn from the textbook, although I will also assign short readings from journals like: Foreign Policy and Foreign Affairs.

I hope that our sessions will be engaging, informative, and participatory. I eschew a strict lecture format. Instead, we will engage in a variety of activities including lectures, personal writing exercises, partner and group work, class discussions, video clips, demonstrations, problem-solving activities, debates, and other critical thinking exercises. I value and will solicit your input on class activities both at the beginning of the semester as well as around midterm. I will make every reasonable effort to incorporate these ideas in the classroom.

4 Requirements

Required Texts

All of the books are available at the bookstore and online. You can find all of the books on Amazon.com or Addall.com at a reduced price.

Many of the articles for the class will be on reserve at the library. You can also find most of the journal articles on JSTOR (www.jstor.org). I will also place readings on blackboard that are not available on JSTOR, and these are noted in the syllabus (*). I expect you to read a newspaper everyday. You can choose any paper you would like, but I would recommend the New York Times (www.nytimes.com) or Christian Science Monitor (www.csmonitor.com) as they generally have the best coverage of international events. Current political developments that relate to international relations are likely to be used as test material.

Assessment

1. Attendance and Participation (20%)

   Attendance and participation are required. I may call on you randomly so you need to be prepared each day. Each day you will receive a point for showing up and one for participating.

2. Tests (50%)

   The tests are a mixture of multiple choice and essay. There are two exams (15% each) and a final (20%). The final is cumulative.

3. Theory Paper (15%)

   Analyze a current issue that is unrelated to international politics (read Jay-Z IR Theory). Compare how three theories of international relations would explain the situation and identify which theory provides the best explanation. The paper should be 4-6 pages, times-new roman, 12 point font. I will provide a rubric with more details about how the essay is scored.

4. Op-Ed Analysis Papers (15%)

   Over the course of the semester, you will read editorial pages of major newspapers and choose five articles to analyze. In each article you should identify the perspective of the author (i.e. Realist, Liberal, or Constructivist), use evidence to support this claim, then respond to the piece from one of the other perspectives. Each response should be one page for a total of five pages.

Make-up Exams and Assignments

Unexcused absences from exams, debates or quizzes will result in a 0 for the assignment. The format of make-up tests will be several long essays.

To qualify for a make-up test or quiz a student must:

1. notify me of the absence in advance (e-mail or call me)
2. provide documentation

Academic Honor Code

Students are expected to uphold the Academic Honor Code published in Southern Illinois University-Carbondales Student Conduct Code (Section II, Article A). Plagiarism is the most serious academic offense. Violations of this code can lead to failure of the course and a hearing with the university’s judicial board to suspend you from the university.

Classroom Courtesy

Classroom courtesy is an essential component of creating an effective learning environment. All students have the right to learn without unnecessary distractions. These distractions include: cell phones, talking during lectures (unless recognized by the instructor), reading newspapers, falling asleep, etc. If you need a cell phone for emergency purposes, leave it on vibrate. Entering and leaving are also significant sources of distraction. It is your responsibility to be on time and to stay for the entire period. In circumstances where you need to leave early, tell the instructor beforehand. Repeated disruptions of class will lead to a reduction in your final grade.

Most importantly, class discussions of the issues in political science can lead to strong feelings and heated debate. Because this is a college classroom, all discussion must be respectful and scholarly.

Scholarly Comments

- are respectful of diverse opinions and open to follow up questions and/or disagreement
- are related to class and/or the course material
- focus on advancing the discussion about issues related to the course and/or course material rather than personal beliefs, and
- are delivered in normal tones and a non-aggressive manner.

Unacceptable Comments

- are personal in nature. This includes attacks on a persons appearance, demeanor, or political beliefs.
- include interrupting the instructor or other students. Raise your hand and wait to be recognized.
- often use the discussion to argue for political positions and/or beliefs. If political discussions arise, they must be discussed in a scholarly way (see above).
- may include using raised tones, yelling, engaging in arguments with other students and being threatening in any manner.
- include ignoring the instructors authority to maintain the integrity of the classroom environment.
Syllabus Change Policy
This syllabus is a guide for the course and is subject to change with advanced notice.
